HMS INVINCIBLE

Length overall 206.6m; beam 27.5m; flight deck 167.7 x 12.8m; depth 6.4m; speed: maximum 28 knots, cruising 18 knots; displacement (standard) 16,257 tonnes.

Powered by four Rolls-Royce Olympus TM3B marine gas turbines. Invincible has a complement of 903, this includes the crew of the six Sea Harriers and the 10 Sea King helicopters. She was commissioned by HM the Queen on 11 July 1980.

The Ski-Jump deck was invented by a Royal Naval Engineering officer, Lieutenant-Commander D. R. Taylor, and is a vital factor in the design development of the smaller aircraft carriers. A 20 degree Ski Jump enables the take-off run of the aircraft to be reduced by up to 50 per cent. It also offers many other operating advantages.

AB42

Everyone should receive the 2-Phase rules plus strategic (schematic) maps this issue. NOTE: I will permit deficit spending, giving you all more PP to spend. On the other hand, economic growth and the cost to maintain an economy are no longer predictable. It's not quite as bad as requiring each player to save at least 50% of each year's income, but you'll still have to save some. I won't permit deficit spending to anyone if it will result in home income dropping below zero.

Inf-2-m2716 & UOF-F @ SMG-m2715 DE

TURN 20 PRESS:

Mr. Cottle, I was extremely shocked your CP in the Nana game was capable of moving through any but clear terrain. THAT was the game. My forces were deployed against Mr. Nester. Mr. Shukaitis' units were the ones you chopped up on C board. We also did not realize the full extent of Jim's new sighting rules. Perhaps your delays of game and phone bill expenditures are very worthwhile. I TOTALLY agree with your remarks as to the refing. I find my pitches to Jim are in error half the time, tho. The rest of the time they are legitimate. I have objections to ARAB. A) the air/sea factors are totally erroneous and insane. B) Jim can't even referee what we have, how can he ref that mess? Norway was MY feint to keep Krauts out of Russia. MUCH worse that I thought. Congratulations. Next year we'll meet again, unless ARAB is used.

PS: Despite YOUR acceptance of SC the Germans had no such fire control system on their guns. Also, the US 2.35 rocket launcher used heat rounds in combat prior to your recoilless rifle. Matter of fact, the Germans got the idea for Panzerfausts from US made rocket launchers captured from the Russians in 1942 which had been lend leased to our Soviet allies.

--J.J.

GERMANY>US, UK & USSR: Guess you didn't want it because you certainly didn't come and set it!

ANKARA (AH,SPI): I also object to the changing of the rules in this game at this late date. The ARAB rules look good for the next game however.

[I've just learned from a player that we don't charge unit maintenance in ABWW2. He also informed me I tried to charge it last year, too.

Well, the new economic formula will allow the expenditure of more PP than in the past so maintenance costs should not prove a hardship to any one player more than the others. But I won't impose it without player approval. The player who objected to me also said he will accept the change if the rest of the players will.

Now let me motivate the idea a little bit. I've made a program to handle all the economic problems of moderating AB games. It's easier for me to keep from getting mixed up if the 2 AB games have the same economic formulas. ABWW2 started with the very simple formula which allowed one to spend no more than half one's income. With DRAB, a more interesting formula was developed, and then applied to ABWW2. But I omitted to include maintenance, although meaning to. Last year I tried to charge it, thinking I had made the change. I'm sure I also said at that time that I will charge maintenance in 1943 if I had not already told players I was charging it for 1942. But I see no one is paying maintenance in their 1943 budgets. So I'm not returning the budgets until we straiten this out.]

Players will find the rules to DRAB included with this issue. You will note the price of aircraft is much reduced, and I will permit deficit spending. It will ruin your economy, so you're not likely to use it unless you're in dire straits. GR is no longer absolutely predictable, although it will vary only within very narrow limits. The PP cost to maintain GR is also slightly random, so you no longer must tell me how much you are spending to maintain GR. You merely tell me a figure which will include amounts to maintain GR and the remainder will be multiplied by GR and added to the income base.

TURN 20 PRESS:

Shawn Flynn, Captain General of the CBL, proclaims today a holiday, as the last of the lily livered Eirianian spade burrowers have scurried back across the straits like rabbits to their warrens. 'Twas foolish of them Steffanites to think they could overthrow members of the True Faith. So long as the Holy Father keeps his eye on his trusty Sons of the Sod, no fear need they have of these devil worshippers. He done put on this earth such protectors as the like of Shawn Flynn & the hearty lads of the CBL. And tis of a like stuff he made those stout fellows of Dasda. For if ye look over there, ye be Dasda some if them Eirianian fellers didn't lose there too! Now the toughest thing for the good Fathers of His Holy Church to do is to stamp out the dirth of Eirianian jokes. They're such as the like as these: "What's black 'n' white 'n' red all over? The Ayatollah Steffen after giving a fair trial to members of the Opposition!" "How do you set 5 Eirianian soldiers off of your spring garden? You jerk one off & the other two come!" "Why are 200 Eirianian soldiers trapped in a McDougal's hamburger stand? They can't find an officer to tell them where the exits are!"
DEATH TO EIRANIANS! LONG LIVE CBL!
DEATH TO EIRANIANS! LONG LIVE CBL!

TULA(AH,SPI): I WILL play all minors in their best interest.

CARTHAGE SPEAKS: Bill, that was an interesting bit of press in Lip 170, but what if anything did it have to do with either the letters I wrote you or my end of same press?

A quick glance at that end same press (which Bumpas duplicated for some reason) will no doubt show I asked for no scapegoat or offered any excuse for my loss other than your good play. I may bitch and moan a lot (right Jim?), but I realize, as you say, "It tends to wash out."

I agree a player handling a minor position should handle it in accordance with the minor's best interests. I believe I've mentioned this to Lord Jim several times. To set the record straight, at no time in any of my letters to you did I say anything to you to indicate I wanted you to take a "dive". As a matter of fact, I complimented you on your good play and suggested you might want to take over one of the abandoned positions in AB. Whose letters and press were you reading anyway?

Aside from your good play I will give you credit for one other thing. You're the first player I've seen who made excuses for not winning a scenario by a larger margin.

Arthur, King of Pendragon, today proclaimed the peoples of the Stygian Wastes to be worthy of the name ally. "We shall not cross your borders save on request to overthrow whatever oppressors may attempt to intervene from foreign soils."

This is the first word heard by the news media of Arthur's displeasure over the invasion of Stygia & Narnia by the Carthaseniens in Year 2. It is supposed this statement is on the wake of several diplomatic protests to Carthage & Emperor Cannibal.

In a separate notice to Sierra Cascade he states: "Sir: I played Germania in Year 1, & was quite capable of negotiating trades with Carthage AS Pendragon, & kicking Charlie's ass as Germania! This year I fought toe to toe with Toltec; lost, but to the last man! Still Pendragon and Toltec carried on negotiations."

If you cannot successfully segregate your major activities from your minor activities, you will isolate yourself.

No matter how good you are, you cannot fight everyone at once. Frankly, people who don't communicate make me nervous."

must be done otherwise. My position in this game was one unit for a long time. That position was to change. My retreat was to BUR, in my thoughts, and from there, unstoppable into MUN. Later I was to own at least 1 of my home centers, making the great circle as it were. Ironically, I received an offer from Italy to put me back into MAR, so I'd not continue against Russia. Italy felt there were 5 nations to 2, making it overwhelming odds. Naturally, I'd not have accepted his offer since it would've meant my eventual annihilation. Siding with Germany, I'd remain in the winner's circle, at least still 1 unit strong, 2 with the dignity of owning my home supply center. Italy, on the other hand, would take out Turkey, but not be able to hold his own against the English, French, German, and Austrian alliance. Of course, you all know Kozlowski comes from the old school of stab, stab, stab. So, beware Howard Hush and Tom Grasse, names mispelt on purpose. Sorry I let you down, Tom, but my body save me no choice in the matter. This is my "end game" statement. Darn it, I usually send advance orders.

Anonymous-Auntieland: Yup, I'm myself alright. Except of course when I'm me. I'm never, ever you however. Is that better. I won't keep you long, I know you're chaffing at the bit to go help out Italy.

Ankara: From my vantage point in my birdbath, the sky was my upper world, while my personal "sea" was my bottom world. My sky looks elliptical, changing sometimes to nearly circular. It never took a mere rainfall to cause things to become wet, and I was usually soaked thruout from the water in the birdbath.
From an overbearing sun above, the water level would become lower & lower, so much so that I sometimes stuck to the feet of large birds who came in interest to see why they could not bathe. Alas, it began to rain hard. The birdbath filled to overflowing. Using the breeze as my sail, I managed to stay somewhat in the middle of the birdbath -- until a big bird dropped in and caused a tidal wave. It was then I found being a spec of dust in a birdbath was not a lasting livelihood. The next time I dry up, I'm going to head out to the Ionian Sea and dust off the Italians who might be lurking there.

Yerba Buena, NEW ALBION: Defense Minister P. Mason today announced a bounty of 1 million rubles for the head of the notorious villain Robert F. Leadside. Leadside is a former resident of La Jolla and is described as "armed and very dangerous". Leadside is believed responsible for the robbery of the Crown Jewels of La Jolla, which is one reason he is a former resident of that country.

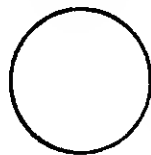

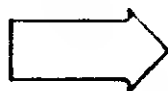

INNER, CALM (UPI) On Turn 19, 2 men and 2 women were caught in the act of stealing research secrets from the headquarters of the YUP Corporation in Inner, Calm. They were identified as residents of Dimashy, Al Damahy. An apology is expected any time from the leader of Al Damahy.

Furstbanthen, Trust (UPI) Officials of the YUP Corporation announced today the finalizing of a major arms deal with a conglomerate of the governments of Chad, Aak, Durn, and Bork. The deal supposedly consisted of approximately 22 pp of infantry and guns, plus 2 heavy cruisers.

[NOTE: COSMOS also politically conquered the following minors on Turn 20: CHAD, AAK, DURN, BORK.]
